

Dwight Sippelle

Dwight Sippelle is the Managing Partner of Sippelle Capital Partners, a family office. In addition to the Naval War College Foundation, he serves on the boards of the Newport Historical Society and The Aquidneck Land Trust.

Between 2000 and 2008, Dwight founded and led Arx Investment Management, one of the 100 largest hedge funds during that period. Before Arx, he was a Managing Director at Morgan Stanley where he started and ran the Global High Yield Department and was a member of the firm's Risk Practices Committee.

Dwight, a Baker Scholar from Harvard Business School and a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Williams College, is the son and grandson of career Foreign Service officers. He grew up in Latin America, Europe and the Middle East. Dwight is married to Susan, an award winning documentary filmmaker. Together they have five children and split their time between Rhode Island and New York City.
